If Chinese Remain Silent on Shantung They May Propose Meeting.

BY JUNIUS B. WOOD. The Japanese delegation is ready to resume the discussion of the Shantung issues at any time and if no suggestion comes from the Chinese delegation today is prepared to propose that another meeting be called. At the same time the Japanese say that they cannot make any! more concessions in the terms for the transfer of the Tsingtao-Tsinan railroad. However, several features incident to the return of Shantung to Baron Kato, for Japan, said the time would come when aircraft limitations would be necessary, but agreed that it could not be done now, and Mr. Hughes summed up committee opinion as against any attempt to restrict airplane development.

Question of Dirigibles. Question of Dirigibles.

This left the question of dirigibles to be considered, Mr. Hughes said. He read the report of the subcommittee showing that limit of size of dirigibles was at least practicable. Whether the advantage to be gained in a military limitation way of fixing the size of heavier-than-air craft, he said, would be more than offset by restrictions thus placed on commercial use of such craft was for the committee to decide.

He said that development was not effective in the four, six and eight room units. The buildings must be beautiunits. The buildings must be beautiful. Congress, he said, had spent much money in providing beautiful public buildings for the government departments here and they should not overlook this feature for the public schools.

Washington, he went on, cannot have a complete and model school system unless it has a university, with its courses in the arts and sciences, including music, medicine and surgery. It should start with a kindergarten and end with opportunity for a university course at government expense. There should be a kindergarten in each grade school building.

The President in a letter to Mr. Dallinger said that while he could be "very sympathetic with the proposition to assign this work to the Boston yard if I could consistently do so under the law," he had been "well assured that there is no way possible in which to permit the Boston navy yard to make a definite price for this service."

LONDON, England, January 10 .league of nation enthusiasts are jubilant over reports indicating the possibility that leading European statesmen, particularly Lloyd George and Briand, will take steps for the further promotion of the essential purposes of the league.

The British and French premiers have never been pleased with the formal apostasy of the United States from the Versailles covenant. They disliked the view that the covenant was ill-conceived and never could result in anything but futility. It is safe to assume that the first-rate men of all the nations signatory to the league felt likewise.

A definite saving from the price tag-15% off.

Only Two More Days at 15% Off

Until Thursday, 6 p.m., all merchandise 15% off. After this date the concession ends.
